Excerpt from the Daily News | Saturday, March 20, 2010

The Met Warner Center, L.A.’s number one selling community in 2009, recently unveiled its unique collection of homes called the Signature Series.® This select series of one-bedroom residences are priced from the low $200s and feature $30,000 in developer upgrades – already included in the price of the home.

In addition to these hip new residences, The Met launched its 2010 Home Buying Seminar Series on Saturday, March 13. A few dozen people attended the first of several seminars scheduled for 2010. The first seminar offered an educational structure teaching attendees about renting versus owning and the in’s and out’s of the mortgage process. In addition to answering audience questions and concerns about being on the fence, how the Federal Tax Credit program works, the Signature Series and general buying inquiries, experts on The Met’s sales team presented a comprehensive property overview and gave a tour of its models.

The 2010 Home Buying Seminar Series will continue to cover a wide variety of topics designed to guide buyers at all levels through the process of purchasing a new home and include expert speakers from The Met sales team and other vital partners.

The Signature Series boasts stylish upgrades including gourmet kitchens with chic, custom glass backsplashes. First floor homes feature espresso hardwood floors, adding an extra richness to the living space, while upper floor units have an upgraded harvest-colored carpeting. Other special touches include track lighting or ceiling fans, depending upon each unit’s configuration, and included window blinds making these residences picture perfect for the first time home buyer. In addition to the stellar upgrades, The RADCO Companies is offering a $10,000 developer incentive on a limited number of homes included in the Signature Series.
